Mascot of Agricultural Recreation Tourism in Taiwan

Lu Xiao-bai

The diversified and rotational appearances of the fields
Breeding the world of man for millennium or so
The water buffalos are forever sealed in the past of the history
For only abide here the thousands or hundreds egrets still Back then, when the buffalos retired, an endless conversation with the egrets during the night have must been taken Yet now, left merely the egrets bounding nearby the midst of cultivating machines
If you desire to ask a story of the farmland in Taiwan
Little egrets should be the perfect counselor to turn to
To see those white and pure figures during spring plowing
A sense of relief and confidence thus sprouts and fills
For that implies an year of a good harvest

Lu Xiao-bai Handsome White

Profession: Farmer
Gender: Male Height: 61 centimeters
Horoscope: Taurus Weight: 5.5 kilograms

Current Status: Assisting his parents with farming in his hometown. Coming from a family whose members have been farmers throughout many generations in this wonderland of fascinating mountains and waters of Taiwan, Lu Xiao-bai (named after the little egret with its white feathers) has already returned to his homeland for farming for three years up till now. Apart from engaging in agriculture daily, he is also quite enthusiastic at partaking in charity and public welfare activities of agricultural recreation.

In order to bring more people to the acquaintanceship and experience of the rustic village, a hospitable host like him, who is an expert of agriculture, forestry, fishery, and husbandry census with all the related knowledge and wisdom, is going to welcome and guide everybody to travel deep into the most natural and primitive environment of the countryside for enjoying the happiness and bliss of life.

Fruits Travel

BEYOND SWEET

Taiwan is the "Kingdom of Fruits".

Fresh Fruits are available all through the year. Don't miss an opportunity to pick-your-own-fruit regardless the season you visit.

Let's enjoy the happiness, health, and extraordinary taste brought forth by taiwan's fresh fruits together.

台灣休閒農業發展協會

Taiwan Leisure Farms Development Association

The Taiwan Leisure Farms Development Association was founded in 1998 as a non-profit organization under the Civil Organizations Act. It aims to develop leisure agriculture and rural tourism in Taiwan and has nearly 200 member farms. It has also been supported by officers from the Council of Agriculture under the Executive Yuan, scholars, and other business owners. Our mission is to bring the academia, the government, and the industry together for a better future of leisure agriculture and rural tourism.

The TLFDA Secretariat is dedicated to helping our members provide high quality services, cultivate cultural charm, and establish brand images. To promote such “quality, taste and brand image,” four divisions are set at the TLFDA:

Administration :

This division is in charge of secretariat management. It is also the division that set up the www.taiwanfarm.org.tw website to promote the exchange and passing-down of insider knowledge.

Human resource development :

The division's missions include setting up the Taiwan Leisure Agriculture Institute, promoting the Leisure Farm Manager Certification, and cultivating managerial talents for the industry.

Industry development :

This division is responsible for studying related laws, promoting the Leisure Farm Service Rating System, and establishing a reliable, high-end industry image.

Farm marketing :

The division is dedicated to the research and development of new products, attracting more international clients, and promoting tourism in Taiwan across the globe from a globalizing point of view.

In addition to boosting agricultural economy, the TLFDA sees itself as the promoter of public environmental education. It aims to bring social stability and sustainable agricultural development to rural areas as a way to give back to society. The TLFDA secretariat believes that “70% of the effort made for sustaining the present, and the other 30% is for creating a better future.” By passing down old-time wisdom, sharing insider knowledge, and spreading the power of love, the TLFDA hopes to make agricultural villages in Taiwan wonderful tourist destinations and great living environments. Not only elder farmers can find their worth, youngsters can also come home to make a good living. In continuing the village culture, everyone can “enjoy a leisurely life while immersing in happiness.”

JUJUBE

Cultivated in both Taiwan and India, jujubes look like green apples. Traditional jujubes have been modified through professional Taiwanese techniques to achieve a tasty, succulent, sweet, crisp, and fleshy fruit, making it one of Taiwan's high-grade products. With a shiny light green peel, jujubes are rich in vitamins C, B1, and B2. As for vitamin C, it has five times more than a watermelon, nine times more than a pear, and 20 times more than an apple, thus earning it the name "Vitamin C Fruit".

Kumquat

Named for their resemblance to dates, kumquats are actually a citrus fruit and are formally known as “golden tangerines.” Yilan is the main production area of kumquats, which are circular or elliptic, golden brown, and roughly the size of a human thumb. Both the flesh and the skin can be eaten, and the skin, which is bittersweet, can soothe the throat, produce saliva, quench thirst, and facilitate digestion. It also can be made into a sweetmeat, which has become a very popular snack.

Bell Fruit

Nearly all year round, Taiwan's people can enjoy delicious and succulent bell fruits, with Pingtung County as the largest cultivation area. With a fine and sweet taste, bell fruits vary in appearance and species based on the changing seasons. In winter, they are red and black, and the darker the color, the sweeter the taste. In summer, bell fruits are light red due to the additional hours of sunshine, which help them to grow more quickly.

Strawberry

Although strawberries are mainly planted in Dahu Township of Miaoli County, the whole island of Taiwan is known as the “Strawberry Kingdom” because of the common occurrence of sporadic strawberry cultivation. Delicate and delightful strawberries are many people’s favorite fruit due to their soft and juicy texture, fragrant aroma, and sweet taste. They also contain protein, organic acid, pectin, and other nutrients. Its vitamin C content is much higher than that of apples and grapes

Loquat

Taiwanese loquats have a short planting period and are cultivated based on their flesh colors, either red or white. The white flesh tastes better and has a firm flesh, juicy and sweet taste, and abundance of sugars, malic acid, vitamins A and P, citric acid, calcium, phosphorus, potassium, etc. Furthermore, loquat leaves, although they originally taste bitter, can clear away lung heat, cure coughing, and protect the voice and is one of the major ingredients in loquat lotion.

Jaboticaba

Also known as treeputao (tree grape), jaboticaba is a variety of grape fruiter which was imported from Brazil during early days. It is different from normal grape in which jabotacabai's pericarp and pulp are rather thick, with a chewy and springy (yet firm) texture that makes it similar to a mangosteen. Besides, it is a high-value fruit rich in vitamin C, calcium, iron, fiber, vitamin B1, etc, over 15 kinds of ingredients in total.

Peach

In early spring, peach trees in Taiwan are beautiful and in full bloom, and in the summer, those flowers turn into sweet peaches.

Taiwan's peaches are categorized as either ground or mountain peaches according to where they are planted, which also results in different flavors. Regardless of where they are planted, all peaches are rich in protein, calcium, phosphorus, iron, and vitamins B and C. The peels are elastic with a covering of dense fluff, and the fruit is firm and sweet, making them a popular favorite among many!

Plum

The plums cultivated in Taiwan come in six main varieties and are farmed on the west side of the central mountain range. Plums can induce appetite, dispel abdominal distention, resolve the effects of alcohol, prevent motion sickness and colds, etc. Since these plums are highly acidic and only slightly sweet, they are not often used as fresh fruit after harvest and are instead turned into plum preserves.

Blueberry

Blueberry, originated from North American and East Asia, is one of the most ancient plants on our Mother Earth. Ever since hundreds of years ago, the Indians, aka aborigines in America, have already been eating blueberries when the rest of the world was still fast asleep. The berries have not only been used in preparing delicate dishes, but also as some secret tonics for the postpartum period of local women's because of their high-nutrient property. Its inherent ingredients include high units of vitamin C and vitamin A whose contents are basically more than any other fruits can possess. Colors: deep blue, dark purple, black, in various sizes and shapes. Edible Instructions: direct consumption, make them into jelly or jam, mix them up with salad, and pancakes dressings, etc.

Cantaloupe

Taiwan basically cultivates four types of cantaloupes: var. reticulatus Naud., var. inodorus Naud., Cantaloupe, and var. albida Makino.

The pulp can be red, green, or white. These muskmelon are rich in such essential nutrients as protein, lipid, sugar, calcium, and iron, as well as Vitamin C and Vitamin A. Each 100 g of pulp can have as much as 30~50 mg of Vitamin C, which can resolve hunger, constipation, fatigue, and lung issues, as well as help with heat and thirst. It is truly a miracle melon.

Common Fig is a gynodioecious (functionally dioecious) species of flowering plants in the mulberry family (Moraceae Ficus), tropical deciduous tree or large shrub, growing in the torrid zone and the temperate zone.

There are overall eight hundreds varieties of ficus carica around the world, most of which belong to evergreen species save those that grow in the temperate zone being deciduous species.

The fig, although commonly referred to as a fruit, is actually the infructescence known as a false fruit in the shape of a bulbous root where at the bottom grows a hollow-ended stem, in which the flowers and seeds are borne: close to the small orifice blossom male flowers while far on the top blossom the females. It also grows sterile flowers, and thereafter the fruit grows seeds, the Blastophaga psenes will enter the fruit and pollinate the flowers.

Watermelon

Watermelon is a quintessential symbol of summer and its sweet juiciness can quench any thirst. It is a nutrient-rich, pure, and safe food that contains no lipids or cholesterol but other critical nutrients that people need. In conventional medicine, watermelon is considered to effectively fight heat and thirst, work as a diuretic, and counter alcohol and can also be used to treat sore throats, stomach aches, and alcoholism.

Longan

The primary production area of longans is located in the low-altitude mountains of central and southern Taiwan. With approximately 13 varieties, fresh longans are shiny and translucent, not sticky or soggy, and taste sweet and refreshing. Longans can be dried by roasting them in the kilns invented by our ancestors. Longan branches are used as firewood for slow burning, preserving the flesh's nutrients, and improving the taste. Dried longans are among Taiwan's specialty agricultural products that are often sought when people visit our island.

Kiwi Fruit

A kiwi fruit contains multiple kinds of vitamins. Consuming two kiwis per day during the summer season can not merely increase the amount of calcium within the body, but empower a greater absorbing capacity that leads progressively to the improvement of a negative sleep disorder. The slight sourness of a kiwi can adequately stimulate bowel motion, enhance digestive power, and reduce flatulence.

Pomelo

Taiwan has 14 species of pomelos, including madouwendan pomelo, white pomelo, and pomelo, with madouwendan pomelo being the most popular. Pomelos contain para-insulin, which has a hypoglycemic effect, making it ideal for people who have issues with diabetes or obesity. Moreover, pomelos contain considerable naringin, which can reduce blood's viscosity and prevent blood clots and stroke. With thin peels and a unique aroma, pomelos are sweet, soft, and juicy.

Roselle

Roselle flowers are often made into flowering tea with honey or into sweetmeats or jams so that people can enjoy their sweet and sour taste. Roselle flowers are rich in anthocyanins, flavonoids, and polyphenols, which can improve people's appearance, adjust blood lipid levels, and maintain the liver in good condition. Furthermore, Roselle can balance human's pH value, thus helping them to stay healthy.

Persimmon

Taiwanese persimmons are generally categorized as either astringent persimmons or sweet persimmons. Astringent persimmons are larger than sweet persimmons and are regularly shaped. After removing the astringency, they become crisp fruit, which are commonly called brittle persimmons. Sweet persimmons are smaller, and their tops are circular with a flat spheroid. The skin is red and yellow. When they ripen, the color turns bright red with a fine flesh and a crisp, sweet, and juicy taste. Sweet persimmons are best enjoyed fresh.

Papaya

Fresh papaya is rich in nutrients, tastes light and soft, and is also ideal for cooking. It contains Vitamins A, B, B1, B2, and C, as well as a variety of minerals (iron, calcium, and potassium), protein, papaya enzymes, cellulose, and organic acids. The amount of Vitamin A and Vitamin C is not only five times higher than that in watermelon and bananas but also three times higher than the required daily intake. It can help prevent influenza or at least relieve related symptoms.

Pineapple

Pineapples can withstand high temperatures and long droughts, so Taiwan's excellent climate and environment possess the geographic advantages to plant pineapples throughout the year. Pineapples are rich in such nutrients as vitamins A, B complex, C, and E, calcium, iron, magnesium, phosphorus, carotene, etc.

Pineapples offer a number of varieties, with the ananas comosus tasting the best and ultimately becoming Taiwan's representative variety thanks to its high sweetness, low acidity, fine flesh, and strong flavor.

Lemon

The fruit of the lemon is particularly rich in organic citric acid, vitamin C, and fiber. The element of essential oil within its pericarp is the exact reason for its special fragrance we often smell. It is a popular and beloved fruit for both health and beauty that is also known by "emerald green", the alias of which appropriately tallies with its appearance, in fruit promotions during the recent years.

Caimito

The fruit of caimito is highly recommended for direct consumption. After its yellow maturity, the pulp of its displays a translucent colloidal matter just like the feature of a jelly whose taste is sweet, smooth, and chewy. But for the reason of its high content of colloid and iron within the skin, we suggest that it be eaten right after cutting since it is so fragile that oxidation often occurs and results in a brown-colored appearance on the surface.

Banana

Subtropical weather brings abundant bananas to Taiwan. Banana contains almost all vitamins and minerals, and it is rich in fiber, pectin, and pectose, so it boosts the vigor of beneficial bacteria (lactic acid bacteria) in the guts and stimulate peristalsis. Banana contains iron, which promotes the growth of red blood cells. The vitamin B2 and citric acid in banana produce a synergistic effect that breaks down factors that cause the body to tire. Banana is rich in potassium, which suppresses blood pressure, so it is suitable for people with high blood pressure or heart disease. The vitamin B6 in banana helps to keep hair black and strengthens the livers.
